EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Dear Archie Readers,

One the most popular trends to come along in recent years is "Swing Dancing." You may have noticed the influence of swing dancing in TV commercials, musical groups, movies, Broadway shows and even the latest fashions. Swing dancing became popular in the 1920's and 1930's. It even carried over into the 40's and 50's. Now when it comes to the latest trends, Archie and his friends are right on them. Which brings us to the latest issue of BETTY & VERONICA SPECTACULAR #35. Riverdale High is where it's at, when the school's cool guys and dolls get their jumpin' and jivin' lessons in their music appreciation class. Even Jughead is into it. As for Betty and Veronica, there's always the competition for dance partners. So slip on those dancing shoes and "cut a rug" down to your local newsstand, comic shop, whatever, and pick up a copy next month. You'll have a great time reading "Swing Time."

If you've ever had the desire to play a video game, but were turned off by the violent content, don't fret. You're not alone. While watching her brother Jason play a video game, Cheryl Blossom is extremely disturbed by its content. However, what seems impossible to you and me, is a piece of cake for Cheryl. She decides that the world needs more "female-friendly" video games. So it's off to Japan, with her mom and grandiose ideas for re-designing the video game industry. Will this multi-billion dollar industry be able to survive? For that matter, will Japan survive Cheryl's visit? The answers to these compelling questions and more can be found in CHERYL BLOSSOM #22 (On Sale in February).

"It's No Walk In The Park" when Sabrina the Teenage Witch decides to take her cousin Esmeralda, an adolescent witch, to an amusement park. Some rides are scary enough, but when Esmeralda starts "spelling," watch out. How would you like to be on a roller coaster ride to the North Pole, meeting real ghosts in the haunted house, or coming face-to-face with giant, mutated insects in the park? Well, all this can be yours to experience in SABRINA THE TEENAGE WITCH #25. Look for this issue next month.

The Platypus

The platypus is an unusual animal. It has a duck-like bill, a furry mammalian coat and webbed feet. It is also one of Australia's two, egg-laying mammals. Their eggs are very soft, and the female must keep the eggs warm for at least ten days. The platypus lives in burrows dug by females. These burrows are dug in the banks of rivers. The female platypus does not breed every year. The male platypus has glands that can shoot poison out at a person or animal to protect itself. The poison is not fatal, but it hurts enough to keep predators away. The platypus eats insects, worms, and small fish. It keeps food in its mouth or cheek pouches until it reaches its burrow. Environmentalists fear that in a couple of decades the platypus will be extinct. There are laws in Australia that prohibit the killing of platypuses.

Chameleons

Chameleons are famous for being able to change color. Their color changes because of temperature or the chameleon's emotions. The change can help it avoid enemies; if a predator is focusing on a green lizard, and the lizard turns pinkish-orange, it might be confused. Chameleons can change color and pattern in less than one minute. They range from 3 inches to 2 feet long. Their sticky tongues help catch prey. Half of the 80 species of tree-dwelling lizards live on Madagascar, an island off the coast of Africa. Most of the other kinds live in Africa.
